

Conor Jordan

Philanthropy Manager

Royal Academy of Music

Along with Sam, Conor is a Philanthropy Manager at the Royal Academy of Music managing portfolios of major donors giving at the five, six and seven figure levels, to support brilliant young talent and secure the future of music.

Prior to the Academy, Conor was a fundraiser at the University of Oxford with a particular focus on managing individual giving programmes. Alongside this, Conor has experience managing theatre companies and performing arts venues.

Conor brings expertise from both the higher education and the arts sectors, at giving levels ranging from regular giving through to principal gifts. At all levels the lesson is always the same – that successful stewardship is about great storytelling. To hear more, join for our session on the six steps to seamless stewardship.
