

Murray Lindo

Head of the Wellington College Community and Director of Development

Wellington College

Murray started his career in banking but found the pull of the family trade of teaching too strong and headed to Bristol University to complete his PGCE in History and Drama. Early into his teaching career he was seconded to Macmillan Cancer Support, which set him on a different path. Since then, he has spent the past 25 years working in the non-profit sector and has held senior roles at Macmillan, Samaritans and Breast Cancer Care where he spent 8 years as Director of Fundraising and Communications.

He is also an experienced consultant having worked with a large number of charities, schools, non-profits, on strategy, communications, fundraising, organisational development, and is a qualified business psychologist and trained actor.

For the last 8 years Murray has been Head of the Wellington College Community and Director of Development. Along with raising funds for their socio-economic scholarship programme and capital projects, Murray and his team run the global Wellington Community network for parents, staff, students and alumni as well as providing career advice and support for current students.
