

Trevor Llewelyn

Secretary

Old Alwynian Association

Trevor Llewelyn attended Dulwich College as a student in the 1970's before taking a degree in Geography at Cambridge University. Following a PGCE he spent two years teaching at Haberdashers' Aske's Boys School in North London before returning to Dulwich where for the next thirty years he took on a number of academic and pastoral roles including as a teacher of Geography, Head of Department, Master in Charge of Athletics and taking responsibility for the development of the House system across the Senior School.

In 2015 he took over as Secretary of the Old Alwynian Association, the alumni organisation for Dulwich College. Since then he has been responsible for building relationships between the college and the association as well as looking at growing the network of alumni engagements across a wide range of professional, sporting and cultural events and activities.
