

Samantha Price

Headmistress

Benenden School

Samantha Price was educated at Malvern Girls' College and Edinburgh University, where she read History of Art (with modules of European History). Having graduated, she joined the Tate Britain and was responsible for marketing for Members and Patrons and became heavily involved with the Patrons of what is now the Tate Modern.

She started her teaching career in 1999 as an History of Art and History teacher at Reading Blue Coat School, where she stayed for a number of years. She then joined King's Canterbury as a Housemistress, History and History of Art teacher. Her next post was to be Deputy Head at Hereford Cathedral School and from there she became Head of Godolphin in 2010.

Samantha joined Benenden as the Headmistress in January 2014 and she has until recently chaired the HMC Wellbeing Committee and the GSA Boarding Committee but now stepped down from those responsibilities as she becomes GSA President Elect. She is a Governor at two schools, one of which is the John Wallis Academy, Benenden's partner school, where she also works very closely with the Head.

Samantha is married with a daughter and a son. Her husband is an Army Chaplain.