

Maša Amatt

Director of Development

The Perse School

Maša has over 10 years of fundraising experience in higher and secondary education and is currently the Director of Development at The Perse School in Cambridge. She is responsible for the School's largest ever fundraising campaign An Enduring Gift, the aims of which are to double annual income streams for the means-tested bursary fund (currently spending £1m/yr), support growth and development of educational outreach programmes with primary schools and to support the realisation of the performing arts centre project, a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to transform the very essence of The Perse.

Prior to joining The Perse Maša was part of successful development teams at St Catharine's College and Christ's College in Cambridge. Before embarking on the career in development, she pursued an academic research career in archaeology and worked in various roles for the United National International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia.
