

Becki Mckinlay

Director of External Relations

Monkton Combe School

Becki Mckinlay joined Monkton Combe School in May 2020 as a member of their executive leadership team. Responsible for admissions, communications, marketing, development, alumni and partnerships, Becki brings 15 years of experience to Monkton.

Before Monkton, Becki was Managing Consultant for six years at Graham-Pelton, a global firm where she worked with more than 80 clients across the school, university, and charity sectors on their fundraising and strategies as well as coaching leadership teams and boards to bring renewed focus and strategic alignment to programmes.

Prior to this, Becki was Head of Individual Giving at the University of Oxford during the biggest higher education fundraising campaign outside of North America. Becki started her career at the University of Reading where she worked her way up to Deputy-Director of Development and Alumni Relations. Becki started her career in the charity sector and has built significant experience across all areas of fundraising, alumni relations, and communications in both start-up offices and established teams.

Becki has a BSc in Geography from Swansea University. During her time at university, she developed her love for charity as well as helping others gain access to education through her roles as Student Union President and Raising and Giving President. Becki is a recipient of the Iain More Award, which recognises outstanding fundraisers early in their career. She is an active member of CASE and IDPE, presenting at and chairing conferences across the UK.
