

Eve Jardine-Young

Principal

Cheltenham Ladies' College

Eve Jardine-Young has been Principal of Cheltenham Ladies' College since 2011, having worked in the independent sector for over 25 years, including at Radley College (Oxfordshire), Blundell's School (Devon) and Epsom College (Surrey).

She had held academic and pastoral roles in both co-educational and single sex schools, having originally worked in industry after graduating from Cambridge University in Engineering Science, sponsored by Arup.

She has spoken nationally and internationally on themes relating to education, including Washington, London, Prague and Hong Kong, and is deeply committed to environmental initiatives, social enterprise, microfinance and development, having been born and raised in Malawi.

She is Chair of the World Leading Schools Association (WLSA) and a Deputy Lord Lieutenant for Gloucestershire, having also sat on the Academic Committee of Marlborough College's governing body and as a governor of the Barnwood Trust, whose work supports marginalised and vulnerable adults in leading more independent lives.
