

Andrew Beales

Development Director

Durham School

Andrew Beales is Development Director at Durham School, a 605 year old school in the North East of England. For 16 years Andrew has worked in senior level development positions in the university and then schools' sector. He has previously led the development operations at The University of Sunderland, Giggleswick School and at the Wakefield Grammar School Foundation.

With a background in astrophysics, Andrew has an interest in data science and using data to improve fundraising and alumni relations.

He is a Trustee of Institute of Development Professionals in Education, and has worked on projects to develop membership and accreditation. A regular speaker at conferences and events, in 2013 he chaired the School's track at the CASE Europe Annual Conference.
