

Caroline Monaghan

Radleian Society Manager

Radley College

Having spent over 20 years developing and delivering marketing strategies to the education sector, Caroline moved to Radley College to focus on improving the Radleian Society's engagement with the Radley Community.

Over the last three years, she has modernised the Society, further developing its value proposition to all of its members. It has moved from an institution which mainly delivers events and publications for Old Radleians, to a Society with a far broader reach, focused on connecting and developing the whole Radley community for the benefit of all. This has led to a re-energised engagement strategy which blends social media, publications and events to maximise all points of contact with the community. She is now focusing on how to better leverage the Radley network to make it more accessible and useful to current boys and Old Radleians both in their careers and in their lives.
