

Dr Christina Floe

Social Impact Lead

Latymer Foundation/ Latymer Upper School

Christina completed her DPhil in Experimental Psychology at Oxford University, running multi-methodological studies in schools looking at gender, age and friendships in improving inter-ethnic relations in UK locations with entrenched divisions. She subsequently worked for a social impact consultancy in London, conducting quantitative and qualitative research and evaluation projects for clients such as Nesta, The London Community Foundation, and the Greater London Authority. She has worked at Latymer since 2020, leading on evidence into strategy for the Foundation's social impact goals. She volunteers with community charities to provide impact measurement and Theory of Change guidance.
