

Kurstin Finch Gnehm

Deputy Director of Philanthropy

Royal Academy of Music

Kurstin Finch Gnehm serves as Deputy Director of Philanthropy for the Royal Academy of Music, where she oversees individual and leadership giving, legacies and donor relations. Previously, Kurstin has worked in a variety of fundraising positions at Imperial College London, London South Bank University, University of Aberdeen and the University of St Andrews, where she played a small role in the 600th Anniversary Campaign. She holds degrees from Linfield University, Oregon State University and the University of Iowa, and sits on committees for the Institute of Fundraising and CASE, where she has co-chaired the last three Regular Giving Conferences. In her spare time, Kurstin enjoys hiking, cycling and running, and lying about with her two Pekingese.
