

Margaret Hunnaball

PhD Candidate

King's College London

Margaret is a former physics teacher, with senior leadership experience in both state-maintained and independent secondary schools. She is currently a PhD candidate, conducting ESRC-funded research into cross-sector educational partnerships at King's College London. Her research interests are partnership working, leadership and education beyond the formal curriculum. Outside education Margaret is passionate about hockey, she was an International Hockey Federation (FIH) umpire and is now on the World Panel for Umpire Managers. She also serves on the European Hockey Federation Appointments Committee and the FIH Rules' Committee.