

Sam Corfield

Development Director

Lord Wandsworth College

Having worked in the not-for-profit sector for over 20 years, Sam has gained a broad range of fundraising experience from roles in a number of charities including a small military fund, Imperial College and Macmillan Cancer Support (where she gained her Certificate in Fundraising Management).

In addition, Sam held several positions in the education sector – both paid and voluntary before turning to Schools Development. She joined Lord Wandsworth College as Development Director in January 2017.

Her focus has been to embed a greater culture of giving across the LWC community by improving donor engagement and stewardship with the aim of creating a step-change in philanthropic income both for our Foundation and for future capital projects. Emphasis has been on increasing income from major donors whilst also reinvigorating the events, regular giving and legacy programmes.
