RHLConsulting

Rachel Hadley-Leonard has experience in marketing, fundraising and development, gained over thirty years in the education sector, with charities, and in industry working for organisations such as the John Lewis Partnership and Aba.

Originally working within the education sector as a Teacher, Head of Department & Senior Leader, Rachel offers a wealth of qualified marketing and development expertise gained through a variety of marketing and fundraising roles, field specific study, and experience at Board Director level.

Rachel is a judge for both the TES Independent School Awards and global InspirED awards, advisor and an independent school Governor. She is also an experienced mentor working with 'new to career' and 'new to role/sector' colleagues, helping them to achieve their own professional goals. She writes for educational media, and is a regular conference speaker.

Rachel currently works as a schools' development, marketing and admissions consultant, working with schools to ensure financial growth, improved stakeholder relations and increased pupil numbers. Rachel's particular strengths lie in the areas of strategy, audits, development start-ups and mentoring.
